Breaking away

Story by

Dennis Sandoval, 12, continues his routine (below) by flopping onto the ground and undulating back and forth in a move called the cricket." On the cover Sandoval, 12, begins his break dancing routine with a move called "the wave," a continuous motion that starts at fingertips and moves down to the feet.

Twisting and kicking on a grass field, the young break dancers aren't sporting the elaborate costumes and bandanna-wrapped ankles made popular by this dance craze.

Instead, they wear the drab-colored slacks and white shirts of St. Joseph's Catholic school in Upland, where Sister Leonie Bracken is breaking the myth that parochial schools are overly strict or militaristic.

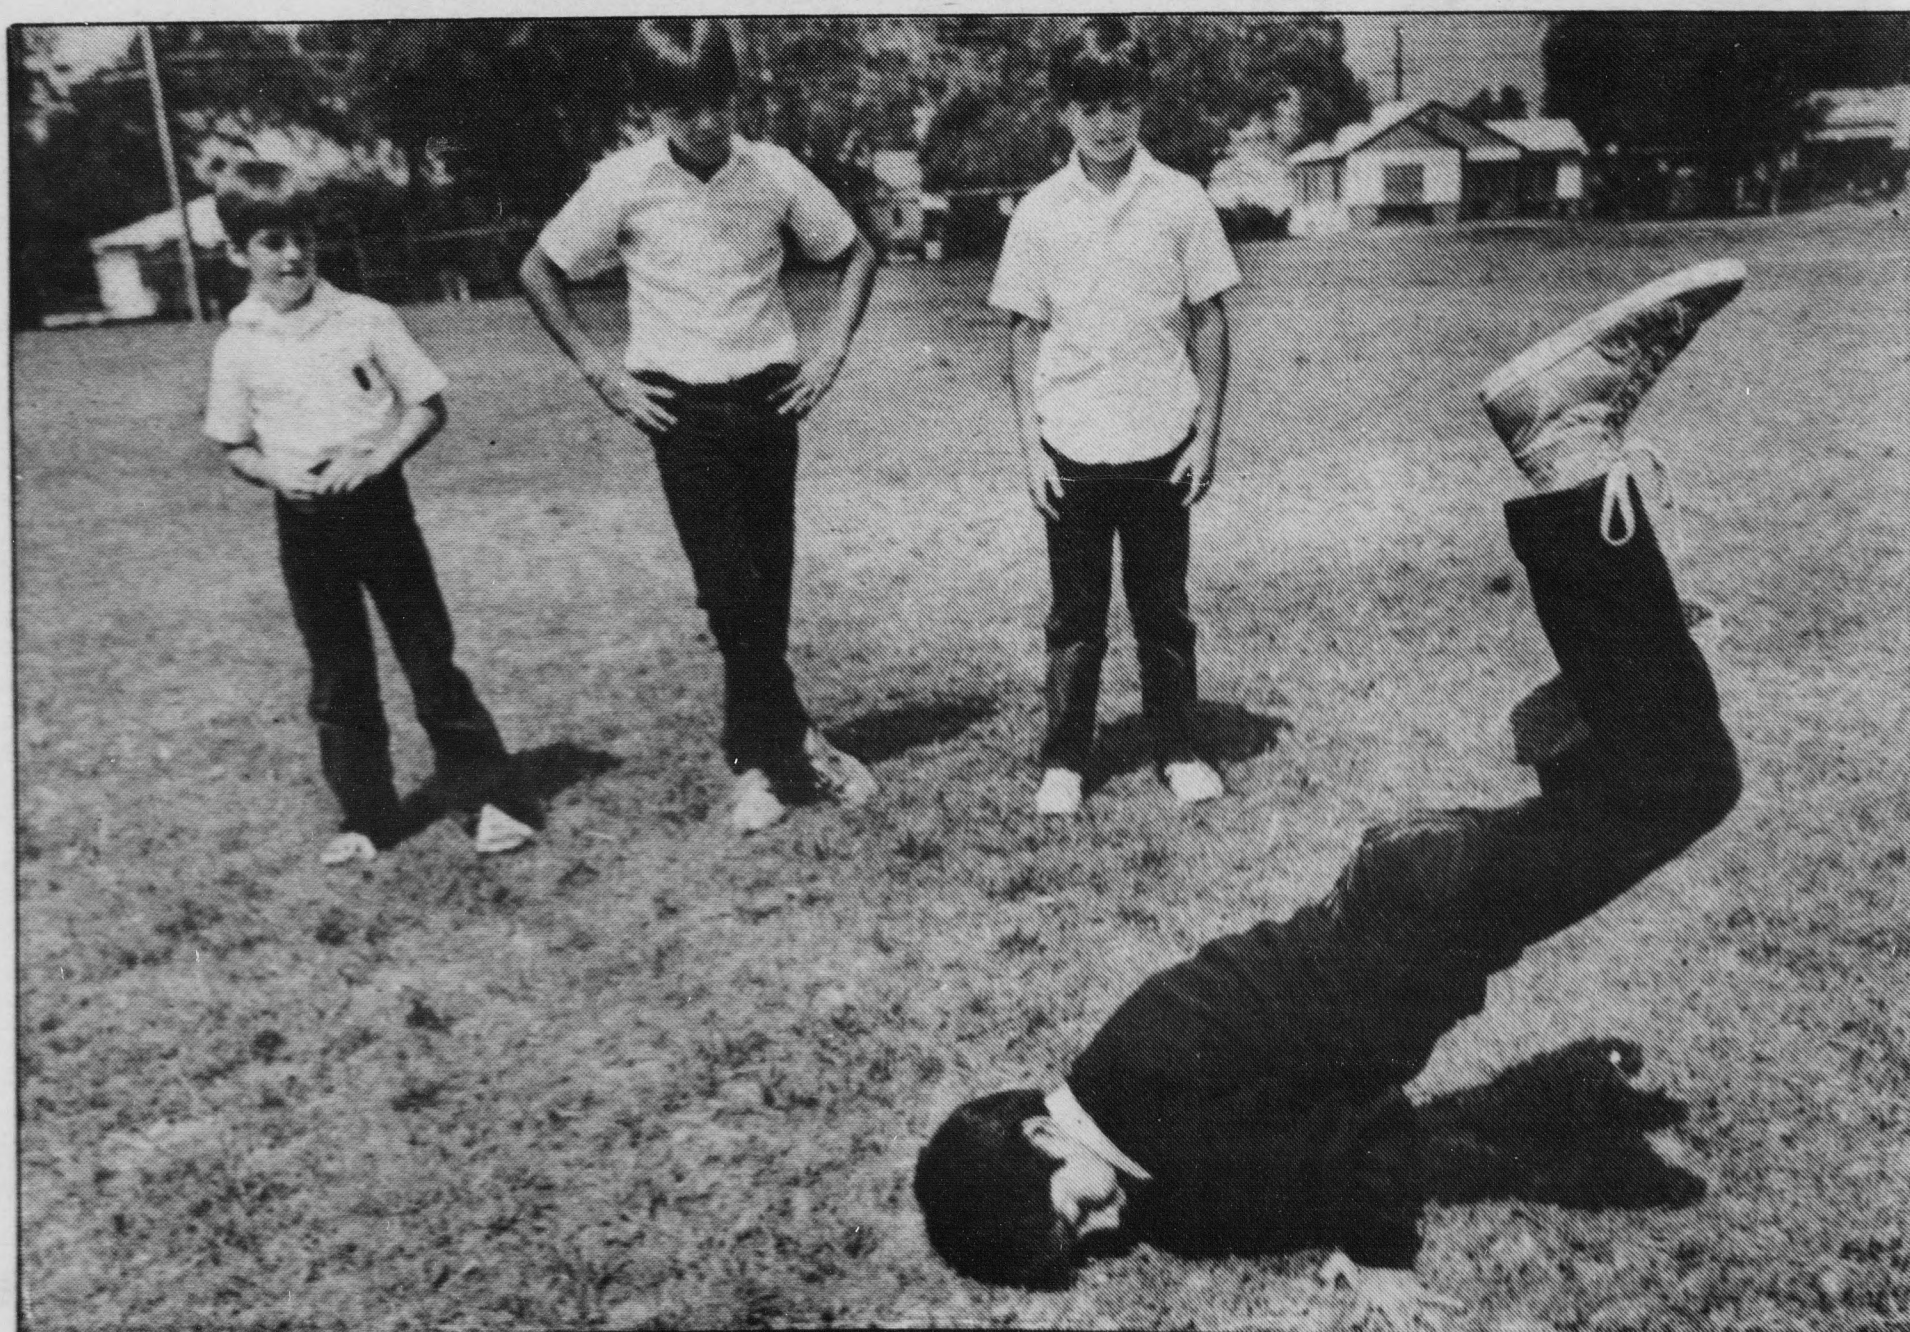

Sister Bracken, principal of the first-through-eighth-grade Catholic school at 905 N. Campus Ave., allows students to practice break dancing during their lunch period every Wednesday.

She also initiated a dance program incorporating the fluid-like movements and backspins of "breaking," the street dancing embraced by many as an answer to gang warfare.

The basic break dance begins with "the wave," a step in which the dancers produce a wave-like motion that begins at the fingertips and moves down to their toes.

Some dancers jump onto their stomachs and undulate in a move called "the cricket."

From there they move into the main dance. Turning onto their backs and raising on all fours, they kick, twirl up onto their shoulders, wrap one leg around the other and usually end by spinning on their backs. Sometimes they spin on their heads.

a king the Myth

"If they (students) are able to move their bodies like that, it's a pity not to be able to use it," says Sister Bracken.

St. Joseph's is one of the few schools in the area allowing break dancing on a continuous basis. Breaking is prohibited as a rule at both junior high schools in the Upland School District and at two of the five junior highs in the Ontario-Montclair School District.

Most educators cite the potential dangers of acrobatic dancing, especially on asphalt or cement.

Sister Bracken says students at St. Joseph's dance on large pieces of cardboard placed on the grass field. All the dancers must bring a letter stating parental consent and must assume responsibility for their own injuries.

The dancing doesn't represent a break in the traditional discipline for which Catholic schools pride themselves, says Bracken.

"Things become a craze. If you keep forbidding kids to dance, then they'll do it behind your back or they'll do it unsafely," she explains.

Besides, Sister Bracken says she has a new-found respect for break dancing, usually performed one-at-a-time within a circle of spectators.

"They never push or shove because they respect the other kid doing the twirls," says Sister Bracken. "They take turns."

The principal's introduction to "breaking" came while she was teaching music.

"I use a lot of gestures and I noticed they started doing their own," she says, raising her hand in a rough imitation of "the wave."

About four months ago, some eighth grade students asked Sister Bracken if they could practice break dancing on campus during their lunch period.

She agreed, later deciding the fad could be incorporated into an exercise program benefiting the "mind and body."

Parent volunteer Sara Anderson of Upland was recruited to teach a one-hour dance class three times a week.

Anderson's program blends the sometimes smooth, sometimes quirky break movements with the fundamentals of tap, ballet, jazz and modern dance.

Her theory is that when breaking fades, the youngsters will continue in the more traditional dance styles.

However, most of the students ardently maintain that break dancing is forever.

"It's here to stay," says 11-year-old Ritchie Martin. "When kids say, 'Hey, you wanna fight?' we say, no we wanna break. So we break (compete) against them. And we dust them."

Martin and buddies, Esteban Chavez, 12, and Nelson Pillow, 12, have formed a break dancing group that "performs" for classmates.

"We're the Sonic Breakers," says Martin, stressing that their logo is spelled "S'n'Sonic." □

Robert Ricks doesn't know what to do with his spare time. In fact, he rarely has any. The Upland doctor is an ophthalmologist by day and song writer by night. He also dabbles with computers, as seen above. He says he keeps his music "positive".

Doctor keeps a hand in everything from ophthalmology to computers

By Terri Tirella

Upland's Dr. Robert Ricks is somewhat reminiscent of a renaissance man.

The ophthalmologist writes songs, builds custom homes and dabbles with computers.

Currently Ricks is concentrating on his music. His protege, 23-year-old Ron Williams has released an album, "I'll Never be the Same," with songs written by Ricks.

The songs have a religious theme.

"We tried to keep the music contemporary, but are changing the trend of lyrics so it's not the kind of destructive, negative lyrics heard now," Ricks said.

Making "positive" music is what Ricks is trying to accomplish. He gets help from his wife, Diane, and arrangers Lon Madsen and Ken Hodges.

"Music is a language almost more powerful than the spoken word, it's very emotional and can cross boundaries of language and have an emotional impact on (one's) well-being," he said.

Ricks and his company, RMR Productions, hope to sponsor more young people in the music business with profits from William's success. Although the album has just been released, sales appear to be going well, according to Ricks.

"We'd like (to be) a place for young artists to be able to get support and not be at the mercy of some big studio," he said.

Ricks has an avid interest in computers and attends every computer convention he can. He's incorporated his own home computer into his music business. "It's a nice way of storing songs," he said.

He describes himself as a romantic. His lyrics speak of love and promises. Some of his songs are written to his wife who, in turn, has written about him.

Ricks began his songwriting career about two years ago.

"I had a personality change three years ago and it was then I was able to write poetry," he said.

The change was like an "awakening," he added. After that, he said, he knew he had the ability "to start a project and finish it and not drop it half way."

Lisa Metz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Metz, Upland, was one of the 275 graduating seniors who participated in Azusa Pacific University's 1984 Commencement exercises earlier this month.

Metz received her Bachelor of Arts in both music education and sociology. She was a member of the concert choir, the Chancel Singers and was on the staff in the Learning Center. □ □ □

Tree crab shows it has its own virtues

By Josie Garza

Although it's been said that man's best friend is a dog, 7-year-old Luke Liebner of Rancho Cucamonga may disagree. His best friend is Sam The Tree Crab.

Kerry Liebner, mother of the youngster, would also argue the virtues of the a pet.

Together, Luke and Sam made a good team when both turned out for the Rancho Cucamonga Pet Preview held May 12 at Vineyard Park.

Sam The Tree Crab made an impression on the judges when he clawed his way around with a freshly-painted exterior of red and gold.

Luke said he painted Sam with the help of his mother, in an attempt to make his friend appear he was from the moon.

The gimmick must have worked, since Sam placed second in the "other" category of the competition. The crab had to compete against guinea pigs, hamsters and rabbits.

Since he got Sam two years ago at the Colton Flea Market, the Valle Vista second grader has made it a point to study the needs of the clawed creature.

"He eats hard fruits and vegetables," explained the young crab expert.

Among fruits and vegetables eaten by Sam are carrots, apples, celery, lettuce and grapes.

Sam's favorite food is apples.

They sleep in the same room, though Sam stays in his aquarium. "So I get to look at him a lot," explained Luke.

When attending school, the son of Jim and Kerry Liebner said he takes a special interest in science.

Luke's 2-year-old sister, Felicity, is afraid of the multi-clawed creature.

"She thinks he'll bite her. He only pinches. He pinched me once on my thumb because I was bugging him a lot when I first got him," said the youngster.

A mystery that has not been solved concerning Sam is his age. "When I first got him, the guy didn't know old he was," said Luke. However, the youngster is confident the crab will be around awhile.

In his spare time, when he's not playing with Sam, Luke enjoys playing with friends and with his television video games. He also takes lessons in karate at the Lions Park Community Center.

"Sometimes I let him (Sam) out and let him walk around the house. Mom doesn't really care — unless he pinches her." □ □

Young girls practice skills for womanhood

By Terri Tirella

Equipping young girls with skills they'll need in womanhood is the goal of the Cucamonga Girl's Club, 8593 Archibald Ave. in Rancho Cucamonga.

Recently, girls demonstrated skills learned to mothers, community advisors and teachers from Cucamonga Elementary School at a specially-planned Mother's Day Tea.

The girls showed off what they have learned at the club for their guests, modeling blouses and handmade macrame belts they made at the club. They presented a Mother's Day play and did a Michael Jackson impersonation to the song "Beat It."

Members also did needlepoint to give as presents to their mothers, and prepared the refreshments and table centerpieces for the fete.

The club, which is sponsored by the Assistance (Continued on page 7)

Ricks said it was then he learned to love other people. He felt he could become anything he wanted.

"Maybe I couldn't be an Olympic champion, but I could support an Olympic athlete, go to every event, run up and down Euclid Avenue with him, listen to the coach," he said.

He also adopted a new philosophy, one based on four principles.

"The first thing you have to do is love that person sitting across from you as if he were you and you would treat him as yourself," he said. "Compliment him freely so you, in turn, can compliment yourself."

His second principle is to allow himself to be a human being who makes errors. "Kings, presidents, all the way down to you and I, make errors."

"Where there's an error, correct it as best you can, but don't turn around and beat yourself to death with it," he said.

Don't say anything negative about yourself and "don't allow anyone to say anything (negative) about you to you," Ricks said.

If someone should say something negative "say 'false' orally so your inner computer hears the 'false' and doesn't register (the information into memory as true)," he said.

"I set rules or limits as an individual, if it's necessary to compromise I will 'cause I don't want to hurt anyone," he said.

"I say 'I've made a change in my life and I'm going to do this or this is not satisfactory.' I define ... limits."

Students get a look at what future holds

By Matt Coker

A group of professionals visiting Alta Loma Junior High School gave students some insights into the future.

Doctors, lawyers, police officers and others volunteered to speak to students to relieve some of the fears they may have about the adult working world.

The career day program was organized by the Hispanic American Professional Management Association (HAPMA). About 50 speakers visited classrooms and gave individual presentations.

One of those speakers included former ALJHS student Raymond Barrera, who now attends Claremont McKenna College. Barrera discussed college life.

Pomona dentist Henry Cisneros described his practice to a roomful of math students.

"You say you practice on people?," inquired a blonde girl.

Cisneros explained his use of "practice" meant working in a profession rather than on-the-job training drilling holes in people's teeth.

Other student questions dealt with whether he accepted insurance, if most people he treats have bad breath and what subject in college was the most difficult.

"Chemistry," he answered in reference to the latter question, "because it applies to everything we do. You learn a deep appreciation for everything around you after getting into chemistry a little bit."

When asked about college, Cisneros painted a picture of hard work and a great deal of fun.

"College was great. Dental school was even greater. When you are done with the academic part of your life, there are so many things to do, so many things to see," he said.

College means "you are starting to get independent," Cisneros said. "You get to become the person you want to be then that all of you want to be now."

Pomona Pitzer student Felicia Fields talked to a dance class filled with girls toting notebook folders splattered with taped-on pictures of the rock group Duran Duran.

Fields, a dancer and former dance instructor, told the students they should watch other dance productions to learn new moves.

But she also urged the students to acquire reading, writing and arithmetic skills.

That same message ran through Joe Baca's outdoor presentation. Baca, a community affairs representative at General Telephone, brought the HAPMA junior high program to the West Valley.

In fact, Baca was the organizer until work commitments forced him to step down.

"What are you going to do?," he asked a male student wearing a Def Leppard T-shirt.

Without waiting for an answer, he continued down the line.

"What are you going to do? Or you? I'm going to ask everyone of you," asked Baca.

At a gathering of speakers after the program, many professionals said they were shocked at how many students have not yet decided what they want to do.

"I had a feeling in the class I was in that the kids didn't know what they wanted to do when they grow up," said Augie Tapia of General Dynamics.

Tapia speculated secure living standards at home may be keeping the students from dealing with the future.

Parents with a problem can get help

By Terri Tirella

There's free help available for parents who are struggling with tendencies to abuse their children.

Getting help to stop the problem will be nearby with the first meeting of a Parents Anonymous group May 31 in Alta Loma. Parents who have physical or emotional abuse problems "which should cover a large amount of the population," according to Linda Janecki, will be able to discuss their problems and share solutions.

The Rancho Cucamonga resident said the group helps people deal with the frustrations of raising children, but often parents don't seek PA out unless they are ordered by the courts.

The closest PA Chapter is in Riverside, according to Janecki, but with statistics indicating three parents out of 10 are abusive, a closer chapter is needed.

"The group is a big help, it makes you feel better about yourself just knowing there are so many other people who have the problem, so much tension is released," she said.

Parents are on a first name basis only and learn to recognize their own feelings and how to handle day-to-day stress. "A parent may have a problem with a particular child for a week," she said. PA parents share problems as well as possible solutions.

The group is sponsored by clinical psychologist Dr. Steve Wysocki of Alta Loma Psychological Association, it is a non-profit, member-run organization. Two clinical psychologists attend the meeting, "not to psycho-analyze us, only (to answer questions) when we get into the heavy stuff," Janecki said.

Janecki realized she was an abusive parent when someone in her family was ordered by the court to join a parent group therapy association. "I knew I was being abusive but didn't know how to control it. I was frightened for myself and my children. I'm thankful I didn't break any bones," she said.

Through parent support groups, she said, she has learned to re-channel her rage and not take it out on the children — but it has taken two years.

"It's as if they are not your own children (when being abusive). It's a scary feeling," she said.

The "scary feeling" is being a parent and feeling the frustration and anger and having no way to vent it. "A child can't fight back ... and even if abused, still will love and protect the parent," she said.

"Most parents who are physically abusive were abused as a child," according to Janecki. All abuses follow a pattern. "One parent is abusive with (his/her) four children and the problem (when the children become parents) is multiplied by four," she said. "If we don't do something now, it's going to continue to multiply. It won't stop by itself."

She said parents generally follow the parenting skills their parents gave them. "You have to go to school for many years to be a doctor or for many other professions, but learning to deal with a life you don't have to go to school."

Because parents passed along bad parenting skills doesn't make them bad parents, according to Janecki. But the problem won't stop until parenting skills are re-learned.

At Parents Anonymous "by sharing problems with each other, we are learning from each other ... The best part of relearning to parent is having an inner peace that you can talk about problems (with children)."

Not only do parents have to re-learn skills and ways to re-channel their rage, they have to re-educate their children. "We have conditioned our children to react in a negative way for attention. They have to relearn how they can be accepted without being abused," Janecki said.

She said her three children, especially the older two, are still very insecure with their mother's changed behavior.

courtesies schools don't have time to teach and the girls doesn't get at home," Irene Nugent, an Assistance League volunteer said.

Career options are another focus of the girls' club. Girls attend field trips and have various speakers from different professions visit the club.

"We've gone to Ontario airport," Shaimberg said, to see different job possibilities. They've also had Craig Peterson present an environmental-ecology program.

A favorite with the girls was a visit from a guest speaker studying to be an animal health technician, according to Shaimberg. The student brought a parrot, a guinea pig and other animals for the girls to hold.

"We want the girls to grow through a better understanding of themselves," said Shirley Swierstra, director of the club. "They seem to enjoy having a place to

A vehicle that's perfectly simple

There are among us car owners who are blessed with a complete understanding of the internal combustion engine and who establish instant rapport when they lift a hood. They do all of their own maintenance and own a garagefull of special tools for the privilege.

Then there are the rest of us who own a crescent wrench, three plastic-handled screwdrivers, and a hammer with a cracked handle held together with electrician's tape. When we open the hood of an automobile we see a jungle of hoses, fed by a swamp of fluids, all driven by a mysterious high-voltage spark within. We resign ourselves to missing the joys of mechanical aptitude and the self sufficiency it can provide, choosing instead to pay the repair bills.

Closet mechanics of the world rejoice! There is a vehicle that is wonderfully simple — simple enough for anyone to realistically expect that he or she will become proficient in its maintenance. That vehicle is the bicycle.

What tools do you need? You will have to add to your crescent wrench, screwdrivers, and hammer, but

'Wiz kids' show off in big competition

By Terri Tirella

Upland students proved to be "wiz kids" at the last district-wide "Math Field Day" competition.

More than 100 youngsters from throughout the district matched their wits in grade-level competition. Fourth-graders tried their computation skills at "Quiz the Wiz" and "Mad Hatter." Fifth graders directed their efforts toward "Word Problems" and "Leap Frog." Sixth graders were tested at "Chalk Talk."

The competition was held at Upland Elementary School and was geared to perk up students' interest in mathematics, according to Selby Forrest, contest coordinator.

"We tried to make it so as many kids as possible could get involved and get all excited about math," Bob Blackney said. Blackney was teacher representative and coach for the Cabrillo Elementary School math team. Cabrillo students scored high throughout the competition.

Students in his math classes vied for various positions on the 12-man team sent to the district competition. Some of his students were not selected for the team until the day before, or in one case, the morning of the competition.

The whole math class was eligible for the team. "I would teach a math concept, then test the kids and accumulate tests scores in a game," he said. During the last two weeks before "Math Field Day," potential contestants were narrowed to two.

For the "Chalk Talk" competition, each youngster had to explain a math

Perfectly simple solution to transportation needs

your bicycle. It is worthwhile to purchase wrenches (box end or open end) for the needed sizes rather than relying on an adjustable wrench, which almost never fits quite as well and can easily strip bolt heads.

You will need a small screwdriver, usually a Phillips head, to turn the adjusting screws on your front and rear derailleurs. You may also need Allen wrenches, simple hexagonal tools, to fit any Allen bolts found on your bicycle (usually on the chainrings and the handlebar stem).

You should also get a pair of pliers with which to pull cables tight, a cleaning brush, and solvent. The only special tool you will need for now is called a Third Hand, available in many bicycle shops. The Third Hand is a large spring that holds the brake shoes against the rim while you adjust cable tension on the brakes.

There are other specialized tools for the bicycle, just as there are specialized tools for the automobile. But, we are dealing with the equivalent of a simple tune-up here, and for that purpose the tools mentioned above are all you need.

Three major areas require the most attention in tuning up and maintaining a bicycle: the power train, the brakes, and the wheels.

The power train involves the components by which a bicycle is driven. It includes a crankset with two or three chainrings (sprockets) in the front, a freewheel with five or six sprockets connected to the rear wheel, and a chain connecting the two to transmit power from your legs. Both the crankset and the freewheel rotate on bearings.

The power train may appear complex, but it's not. The primary consideration for maintaining the power train is to keep it clean. Use a mild solvent (not gasoline!) and a brush for this task. When cleaning the freewheel be careful to brush away from the hub so you won't push grit into the hub bearings.

One method for cleaning the chain is to hold either a brush full of solvent or a rag soaked in solvent against the chain as you rotate the crankset in reverse.

Try to remove as much of the grime as possible from the derailleurs, the freewheel, the crank arms, and the chainrings. The cleaner, the better.

Your cleaning task will be made much easier if you purchase an inexpensive workstand to hold your bicycle.

'Wiz kids' get it their all in competition

concept before the class in one minute. The other students evaluated the presentation.

"Chalk Talk is more than manipulation of numbers or simple computations, it takes a look at math as a system of abstract things. The goal wasn't to get the answer, but to understand the concept so they can tell someone else about it," Blackney said.

To prepare students for "Quiz the Wiz," Blackney gave tests with 160 problems touching on every area of math. "Students would list items they had problems with and we'd look at the lists and work it out," he said. "The idea was to get good in math so you could be in the math fair."

"Quiz the Wiz" competitors worked on 70 straight math problems in 35 minutes. The first place winner had 60 correct answers.

At the "Math Field Day," different contests concentrated on various math skills. "The 'Leap Frog' relay is a joint test. Two students work as a team, they do part of the test and then are taken out of the (testing) room, without pencil or paper, to discuss different problems. Then they trade papers and complete the test," Blackney said. Their scores are combined for a competition score.

In the "Mad Hatter" competition, students had to think quick on their feet, according to the math teacher. "Only about half the students finished the problems (shown on an overhead projector screen). He might hold up a piece of pipe and ask what measurement it might be. Students had to have good judgement and quick thinking," he said.

In the "Chalk Talk" competition, students not only needed to be good at math, but needed a thorough understanding of it as well. Topics for the talks included exponents, ratio proportions and polygons.

Students who participated in this year's contest won't have any advantage over competitors. The contests change for each grade level, so someone who may have worked on word problems this year may have to compete in "Chalk Talk" next year.

"We have a committee who works each year along with teacher representatives and parent representatives from the schools," Forrest said. Schools sending children to the district-wide competition were Baldy View, Cabrillo, Citrus, Foothill Knolls, Magnolia, Sierra Vista, Sycamore, Upland Elementary and Valencia.

PTAs contributed financially to the project and members volunteered hours of work to make the field day a success, according to Forrest. Others contributing prizes were the Upland Rotary Club, Avid Electronic, California Computer School, Pomona First Federal, McDonald's Restaurant and World's Finest Chocolates, Forrest said.

Judges chosen for the competition were district-affiliated, not school affiliated, so "they wouldn't be rooting for their schools," Forrest said.

Cari Ryan, a fifth grader at Cabrillo, said she worked on problems in the eighth grade math books to prepare for the contest. She competed in the word problem category, where she placed second.

"We would look for clues in the problem. If you saw the word 'of,' it was multiplication," she said. "The first problems were easy, then it got harder as it went on."

While clients are away, play

While clients are away on vacation, a 29-year-old Rancho Cucamonga woman will visit a home, feed the pets, water the plants and bring in mail and newspapers.

Liz Field, who calls her service "Pampered Pet Watchers," has been making house calls for the past year and a half.

Through her service, in-home care has been given to dogs, cats, rabbits, horses, tropical fish, birds, goats, hamsters and guinea pigs.

The Ontario native said she came upon the idea of providing home care while working at a veterinary hospital.

After hearing pet owners say how they wished they could leave their pets at home when on vacation, the licensed animal health technician thought up the novel business and decided to try it out on a trial basis.

Reaction to Pampered Pet Watchers was positive.

Individual jobs vary, Field said.

One time, she took a job where she cared for 15 rabbits, one horse, two dogs and five cats.

"The whole job was a handful. It was one of the more enjoyable jobs I've done though," said the curly-haired woman.

On another occasion, Field said her hands were kept full with a single cat.

"I walked into a home one day and saw a calico cat named 'Tiffany' had gotten into the fireplace. It (the cat) was just covered with the charcoal and I was trying madly to clean it up so it wouldn't get all over the furniture.

Field said she learned later that Tiffany was infatuated with climbing the roof and dropping down the fireplace.

In her home, Field's love for animals is evident in her possession of pets.

She and her husband, John have a five-year-old black cat named Jigs, two cockatiels (one named Turkey and the other called Nimitz), and 26 tropical fish.

If she had her way, Field said, she would have as many animals as she had to care for on her biggest job. Someday, she said, she hopes to sell her husband on the idea.

Meanwhile, she channels her affection for animals into caring for the pets of her clients.

In-home care is healthier for pets than kennel care, according to Field.

"They're a lot less stressed. They're in their own environment and they don't run the risk of being exposed to other animals with respiratory diseases, which they may run into in a kennel," she said.

Field said animals know when there is something different happening to them. She said the animals can handle being without their owners as long as they can feel the security of being at home.

Busiest times for Pampered Pet Watchers is during the holidays.

Last Christmas, Field said, she was so swamped with jobs that she decided it was time to hire two assistants.

Field's service is not listed in the telephone book because she missed the publication deadline.

Legion team eyes trip down under

By Ron Witt

Not everyone will have opportunity this summer to explore "The Land of Wonder, The Land Down Under," as the Australian TV commercial suggests.

But the inviting message seems to have gotten through to at least one group of Americans — members of the Upland American Legion baseball team, who are hoping to travel and play in Mildura, Victoria, Australia in late August.

The Upland Legion squad has accepted an invitation from Mildura (Upland's sister city) to tour and play exhibition games with local teams to help celebrate the Australian city's Golden Jubilee (50th anniversary).

Mildura, population approximately 40,000, is located 400 miles north of Melbourne. The Uplanders probably will fly into Melbourne, then be bused or fly on to Mildura.

Preliminary plans call for the Upland contingent (including players, coaches, coaches wives, a scorekeeper and parents) to be housed in private homes during the 10-day stay. At least 26 people will be in the Upland party, and more could be going.

According to Sue Baker, wife of Upland manager Ray Baker, in-country expenses incurred by the American visitors will be paid for by the Australians.

However, it is up to the Uplanders to pay their own air fare — no small matter since preliminary estimates predict a bill over $30,000.

Undaunted, Baker said she would begin soliciting funds immediately from local businesses, the Upland Chamber of Commerce and private sources to help defray travel costs.

Donations can be sent to the Mildura Travel Account, P.O. Box 303, Upland, CA 91786.

Al Canestro has been designated the fund-raising chairman for the project, and Len Vondran is the treasurer of the Mildura Travel Account.

Upland players begin their summer schedule Friday. Redlands Post 106 will provide the opposition at 8 p.m. in a first-round game of the Ontario Host Lions Club Tournament at Ontario's John Galvin Park.

Signed up to play for Upland in the summer program are Jeff Abel, Mike Catalano, Dave Compton, Jeff Connelly, Rick Davis, Bryan Givens, Ben Macaluso, Fernando Maldonado, Jesse Mandujano, Bob Moxley, Frank Pigoni, brothers Dave, Steve and Tom Vondran and Todd Wessell.

Butch Bradley, Dave Hopley and Mike Sloan are assistant coaches.

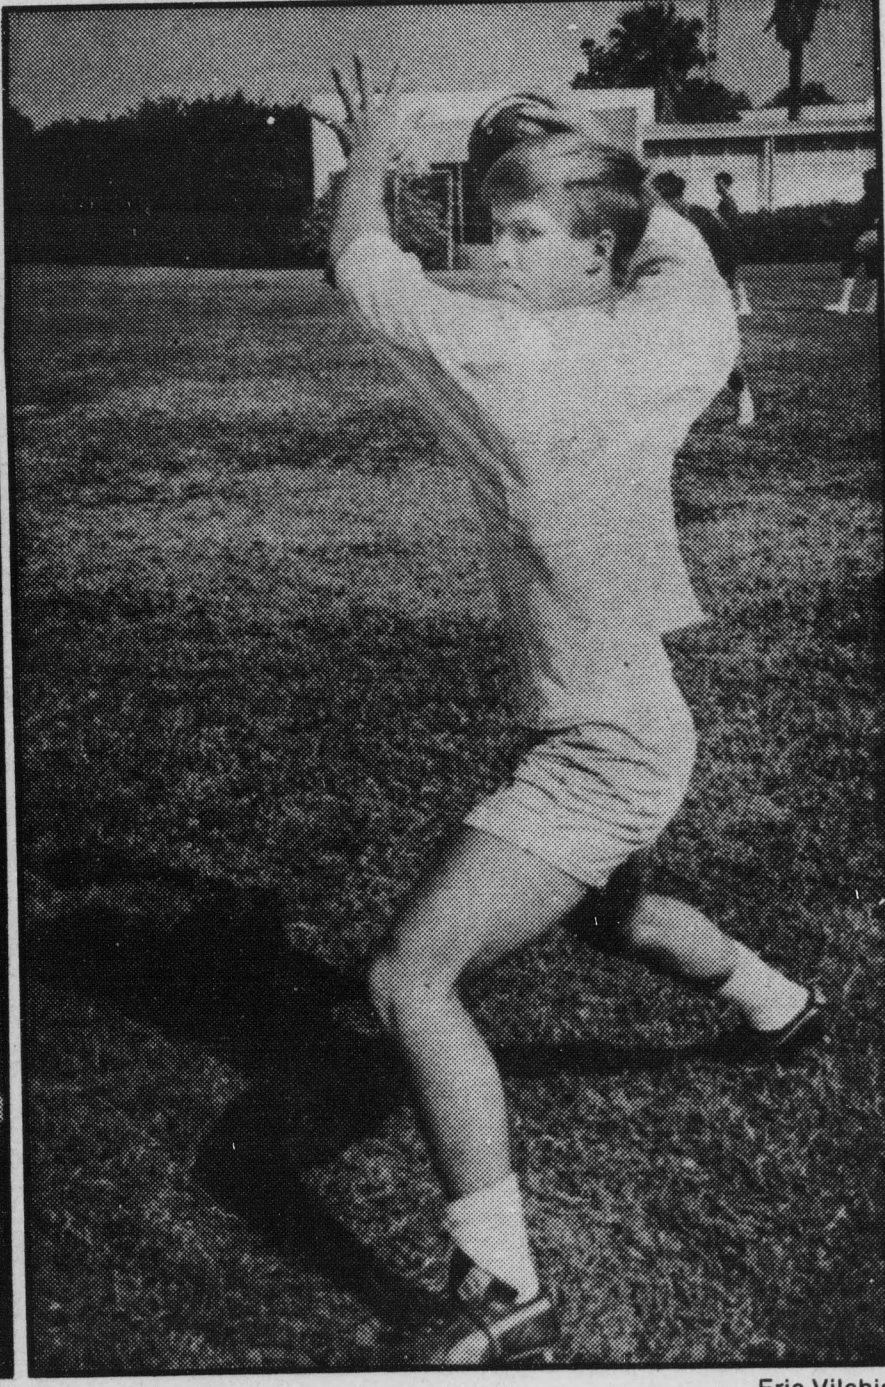

After this weekend's tournament commitments, Upland starts District 25 play at Chino at 5 p.m. Tuesday, then hosts Rialto Post 844 Wednesday and Corona Friday in 7:30 p.m. contests at Upland's Memorial Park.

Upland will be vying for Division II honors in District 25 along with Montclair, Redlands 650, Rialto Post 422 and San Bernardino.

Chino, Corona, Ontario, Rancho Cucamonga, Redlands 106 and Rialto 844 teams make up Division I.

Line coach Cam Heald has advantage point atop blocking sled.

Scots begin spring football drills

Although 18 lettermen return, next year's Upland High School football team will be a rather inexperienced lot. But then that's one of the reasons for spring football. Better that the inexperience shows now than in September.

"We're going to be predominately younger than we have been the last couple of years," Highlanders coach Leo Guest said recently. "We're in the process of evaluating the talent that we have."

Guest said that about 60

varsity and junior varsity candidates began spring drills Monday.

He expects an additional 12 to 15 athletes to join the group before practices conclude June 8 with an evening intrasquad scrimmage at Upland High School.

Of the 18 returnees from last season's 4-5-1 squad, five are returning starters that Guest hopes will stabilize the Highlanders' offense. The Scots should be strong in the

Vondran MVP in Baseline

Right-hander Dave Vondran, whose 8-0 record helped Upland High School win the Baseline League championship, was one of three Vondrans and eight Highlanders named all-league by a vote of BL coaches.

Vondran was named Baseline Most Valuable Player for his contribution to Upland's title-winning season. The senior compiled an impressive 2.20 earned run average.

Steve Vondran, a junior first baseman who hit .522 in league, was also a first-team selection, as was Mark Divincenzo.

The senior third baseman hit a lusty .478.

Pitcher Rick Davis and second baseman Jess Mandujano were selected to the all-league second team. Davis, a senior right-hander, was 2-1 with a 2.85 ERA. Mandujano batted .431.

Sophomore left fielder Tom Vondran received honorable mention, as did Highlanders Bryan Givens, a senior catcher, and Bob Moxley, a senior shortstop.

Upland finished 12-2 in capturing the Baseline title. The Highlanders finished 17-6 overall after losing 6-5 to El Dorado in the first round of the CIF 3A Division playoffs.

Kufta pole vaults to state qualifying meet

Battling the best Southern California has to offer, Upland High School pole vaulter John Kufta will be out to earn a berth in the CIF State meet with a qualifying mark this Friday and Saturday during the Southern Section Regional meet at Cerritos College.

Kufta, a senior this season at Upland, posted a second-place finish at last weekend's 3A division finals at Cerritos. Teammate Mike Smith garnered fourth place.

But it was Kufta's 13-foot-6 mark that made him one of the top eight finishers in the four divisions, allowing him to advance to the regional qualifying meet this weekend.

Other qualifiers include Chuck Houde (4A champ, Simi Valley, 15-0), Fritz Howser (3A champ, Newport Harbor, 14-6), Tony Young (1A champ, Coachella Valley, 14-6), Steve Horvath (1A, Chaminade, 14-6), Jeff Lee (4A, Santa Monica, 14-0), Jeff Ronlov (4A, Rolling Hills, 13-6), Mark Walsh (1A, Notre Dame-Riverside, 13-6). Alternates are Jeff Lawler (4A, Rolling Hills, 13-6) and Rich Luizzi (4A, Burroughs-Ridgecrest, 13-6).

Other local qualifiers are Fontana triple jumper Godfrey Byass and high jumper Andrew Dove from Montclair.

offensive line where three starters are coming back. Derick Bangle (5-11, 185) and Mike Jeong (5-11, 185) return at guard, while Ed Lyon (5-11, 185) will be back to claim his tackle position.

Mike Anaya (5-11, 185) started at tackle last season but will be switched to fullback in 1984. Anaya will be joined in the Upland backfield by Mike Ulloa (5-6, 155), a tailback who rushed for more than 500 yards and was all-Baseline League second team as a junior.

Four underclassmen are vying for the quarterback position. David Skvarna and Sean Cierniewicz, sophomores who guided the junior varsity last season, are joined by freshmen Greg Fiorindo and Jeff Rhodes as candidates.

"Hopefully we'll get off to a better start," said Guest, whose '83 team lost its first three games.

Celtics in title game

It's showdown time for the Upland Celtics.

The boys under 16 squad will face the La Jolla Nomads for the California Youth Soccer (CYA) State Cup championship Saturday morning at 10:30 at Cal State Northridge.

According to coach Matt McDonagh, the Celtic advanced with a semifinal victory over Torrance. The winner of Saturday's game will advance to the regional competition in Denver next month.

Steve Taylor leads the Celtic attack. A member of the team for six years, Taylor has scored more than 300 goals.

Hearing Test Set For Ontario

(Ontario)-Free electronic hearing tests will be given at the Beltone Hearing Aid Center Office at 608 N. Euclid, Ontario on Monday & Tuesday from 9:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Anyone who has trouble hearing is welcome to have the test. Many people with hearing problems don't need hearing aids. But only a modern hearing test like the one now being offered by Beltone can really tell for sure. Licensed Hearing aid Dispensers will conduct the tests.

Everyone should have a hearing test at least once a year if there is any trouble at all hearing clearly. Even people now wearing a hearing aid or those who have been told nothing could be done for them should have a hearing test to see if modern methods of hearing amplification can help them hear better. Hearing aids will be available for purchase.

Hearing is a family matter so please bring your husband or wife with you if possible.

The free hearing tests will be given Monday and Tuesday from 9:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., 608 N. Euclid, Ontario. To avoid waiting call 984-2248 for an appointment. If you can't get there on Monday or Tuesday, call to arrange for an appointment at another time. In-home testing is also available.

competition, Laura Mazur is also one of Blackney's students. "You're nervous before, but once you get up there and do it, it's a different experience," Mazur said.

She said she practiced after school and during recesses to prepare for the competition and made presentations in front of class. Polygons were her weakness. "I didn't know much about them until we started covering it ... It was a lot of material to cover in a short time."

Fourth grade winners of "Quiz the Wiz" included Sycamore student Kenny Kaveman, first. There was a three-way tie for second with Emily Farnworth, from Baldy View; Cynda Boland from Cabrillo; and Xan Tolbert from Valencia. Magnolia student Bruce Penner placed third.

In the sixth grade "Quiz the Wiz" contest, first place went to Sunny Le at Cabrillo, second place to Amy Allred of Sierra Vista and third to Ruthann McCallison at Cabrillo.

In the fifth grade "Leap Frog," winning teams were Thomas Kim and Le Choy of Valencia, first; Shawn Le and Vu Le of Cabrillo, second; and third place went to Michael Wilson and Darrell Beutel of Magnolia.

Is that $2 glass of house wine really worth the price you pay?

By Dan Berger
Copley News Service

Is that glass of restaurant house wine worth the $2 or more you're paying?

It depends. If you're satisfied with it; if it doesn't make you gag; if chilling it near the winter temperature of International Falls, Minn., helps its flavor; if you don't demand much, then, sure, two bucks for a six-ounce pour of the stuff isn't bad.

Consider this. Many restaurants pour "house wines" that they buy by the 18-liter box. (There is a sealed plastic bag in the box that holds the wine; it's dispensed via a spigot. The whole thing can be tossed out when the wine is gone.)

These 18-liter boxes cost in the neighborhood of $18 to $20. (Yet prices in this segment of the wine industry are subject to various pressures, and I have heard of much lower prices than these.) This makes the cost of a six-ounce glass of house wine about 20 cents, or less.

Thus the restaurateur is making a small fortune selling house wine. So, for that matter, are wineries. ("House" wine is not the same as "premium-pour" wine, which sells for $4 to $5 a glass and is of premium quality.)

Wine served out of a keg that is three times the size of an 18-liter box is easier to manage (less switching is involved) so keg wine has been making inroads into the nation's restaurants in the last two years.

One of the first to explore the national market for wine in kegs was a beer maker — the nation's largest. Anheuser-Busch, which already had steel kegs of tap beer in the market, began a keg-wine program two years ago, and that got the rest of the industry thinking.

Now Almaden is experimenting with the idea; Paul Masson is going forward with a project in keg wine in Orange County, Calif.; Inglenook is looking at the situation in Chicago, Denver and in some East Coast cities.

And one of the most aggressive in this line of wines is a company you probably never heard of before, but it's a company that appears to have a solid lead in at least one department: enthusiasm.

Louis Glunz Inc. is the name of the "winery."

Well, actually the name of the "winery" is Coastal Valley Cellars. Well, actually there's no winery, as such and Louis Glunz Inc. is really a beer distributor in the Chicago area and it happens to market wines called Coastal Valley that are made to its specifications.

Joseph Glunz is vice

How much is that house wine really worth to you?

president of this firm, which was founded 95 years ago by his grandfather. Today it is the oldest Schlitz distributor in the nation and a wine importer, among other things. And Joe likes to say he pioneered wine in a keg. "It was in 1976, in Illinois," he said. "We started slowly, with only 500 barrels." By 1980, he had expanded into Ohio and Minnesota, and today is offering wine by the keg nationwide.

House wines for restaurants used to be poured out of four-gallon bottles with screw caps.

In the late 1970s, 18-liter bag-in-box wine became popular. Geyser Peak Winery made the first major splash in the market with bag-in-box wine. Many others followed, most recently the Carlo Rossi line of Gallo.

The keg idea, Glunz readily admits, bothered some restaurateurs.

"I know," he said, looking up in frustration. "They say they want Chateau Cheapest," but he said they looked at the stainless steel cask he offers, which holds 58.7 liters, and weren't sure about it.

Fears that the wine would spoil before all of it was sold were dispelled, he said, by showing that the wine inside was blanketed by the inert gas nitrogen, protecting it from air. And he began to gain supporters based on the good quality of the wine and on the fact that it doesn't need refrigeration, yet the wines may still be served chilled.

Glunz's wine is made at Sierra winery in Delano, Calif., one of the largest bulk wineries in the United States. And Glunz says he achieves better quality than some of the bulk producers by going to Sierra himself each (Continued on page 30)

Wines

year to make up the master blends.

As for the refrigeration problem, that is solved by a device attached to the keg called a cold plate. It sits in a tray or barrel of ice, and the wine is drawn through a coil attached to the cold plate. As the wine runs through the coil, it is chilled to serving temperature.

Glunz charges $67.75 for a 58.7-liter keg of white, red or rose Coastal Valley wine in Chicago (prices vary around the country due to lesser or greater taxes), and he says the wines are better than other keg wines, if slightly more expensive.

I tasted the white and found it quite acceptable. It had an aroma faintly reminiscent of chenin blanc, and wasn't as sweet as many of the bulk wines I've had in the last year.

"We think it's a superior product, and we can sell it at a price that's fair," he said. "We don't have the cost of the glass (the bottle) or the cork or the cardboard (the box), and the keg is reusable.

"The cost of an ounce of the cheapest bag-in-box wine is about 3 cents; our wine works out to 3.4 cents an ounce. The average cost of a glass of house wine to the restaurant is 15 to 17 cents, and we feel that if the restaurateur puts an extra penny or two into the glass of wine, his chances of selling a second glass are much better than if he served 'Chateau Cheapest.'"

Now Glunz is going to try something different. He is going to offer kegs filled with Chardonnay — the most expensive white wine in the world — and offer the wine at less than 7 cents an ounce.

The wine will be from Washington state and is not aged in oak (thus it costs less to make, since no barrels have to be bought). I tasted the first sample, and found it quite well made — fresh and crisp in the aroma, dry and well balanced on the palate. It is better than most jug wines I've tasted, yet its cost, about $140 for 58.7 liters, works out to only $1.80 for 750 milliliters (the amount in a "fifth" of wine).

Glunz says he's not trying to challenge the major wineries. He admits he's not a major wine producer trying to sell $18 bottles of Chardonnay.

"But we know this is a better wine than a lot of them out there," he said.
